Legal and industry-supported through partnership with anime industry! Final exams. A time when all your hopes lie in something where 30-40% of the final class counts for it. Where it's stressful as hell hoping you don't disappoint. Where do you do long nights and study your ass off on a long day at work. Whether it's high school, college, or any other, exams are lengthy on the body, mind and sleep schedule. So it's important to have them in anime, too. It's time for the final exam at the MHA. To begin the episode, the TV show has Mt Lady and Midnight on, focusing on their costumes, and all the sexy they bring. Midnight is a case for them about how quirks get hampered said unis. Just for Mt. Lady to go to her about her age. Both get into a catfight, while some, small persuasion watches on. Back in the U.A., students have a week before exams begin. Some are worried about studying for it because they are at rock bottom (like Uraraka, who finished 13th on mid-term), while others aren't so much. So did Mineta, which finished in the top 10 in mid-terms. No, really. I can't believe it either. Izuku, Iida and Todoroki say bottom-feeders do the best they don't have because these three finished in the top 5. Yaoyorozu, who finished first in mid-terms (Note: Know who rounded out the top 5 in mid-term ranking third? Bakugo) wants to help others, although he can not much help on the practical. Others have come to her for said help, and she is excited to be studying sessions at her home for the weekend that they need to get ready for it. Others found out she was a rich girl, but it's okay because Yaoyorozu is cute. The exam will be all they did during the semester, along with the study, so they have to be in top conditions as well. As they continue their lunch, Monoma from Class B arrives, and as talk spreads Izuku and co face Stain, telling them that Class A is still a shortcut for getting into trouble. Kendo comes and closes him, and he's nice, tells them what she heard from the upperclassman. They said the practical test is just fight versus robots, as well as entrance exams. While it's easy, Izuku knows all he could say about his future, and knows he can't take it easy. The others heard it, and Bakugo chewed them for it. He calls Izuku just as he is still annoyed Blanket uses his moves while improving his Quirk. He promises to come out on top when he leaves angrily. Rubber Head can see Bakugo has deteriorated. As the weekend arrives, the study group arrives at yaoyorozu place. It's a big place. A really big place. They see she's already rich, but serving her cutely makes them forgive her again. When they study, other students do everything they prepare for the final. Either work together or study and train yourself. It's a process that some have problems with. Written exams come and go. After three days of writing, it's time for practical exams at Center Plaza. Teachers are all gathered there because they get that information about what would happen. Director Nezu appears from Eraser Head Clothing to tell them that this test will be different. No robots. Just a man-to-man fight. Keep it close to real fights. But who are they fighting? Their. As can be seen in the headlines, students are fighting as teams of two, with teams and a teacher pair-up already decided. The first two are announced, as Yaoyorozu and Todoroki will face Eraser Head. And then it is announced an unexpected pair-up, as Izuku and Bakugo will be the team. Who will they face? That big dude himself, everything can. It flashes back to a few days as teachers talk about the consequences of Stain and the League of Villains, and how to get stronger because robots are basically useless in this situation. They come up with this plan, and how to get them to work. Most of the time, they go to weaknesses. Like Todoroki and Yaoyoroz. Todoroki is a little cheeky, and Yaoyorozu lacks decision-making skills at the right moment. So, they have Eraser Head to face them in a tight fight. And Bakugo and Izuku? It's not too hard to figure it out. An added problem with them is Izuku's pbb for all might. All student teams and teachers choose, with Izuku/Bakugo facing everything can take. The time limit is 30 minutes. Students will have to either put handcuffs on teachers or one of them escapes the battle stage to win. It's like combat training, but much tougher, with them having to think of teachers as villains. They agree that they can run away if the power is too much. To help in this, support a course in ultra compressed scales to allow teachers to wear them as handicaps for combat (That was Mei's suggestions too. I can't forget her.) The first fight involves Sato and Kirishima taking on Cementoss. Some of the teams devise strategies for their fight, Mineta invents perverse ideas, and Izuku and Uraraka can not devise strategies with their partners (Uraraka partner is narcissistic Aoyama). As they watch the first fight in the monitor room, Sato and Kirishima launch their attack. They know it's slow, so they're both going to attack Cementoss from the front. Sato eats into a pack of sugar, activating his Quirk, Sugar Rush, which makes him 5x as strong for 3 minutes, for every 10g of sugar consumed, with his brain power dropping as well. Cementoss predicted it, and makes a lot of cement walls to stop them. The duo decides to crush the walls with all their strength, in a certain way. As in, they ORA!!! their way through it. Which brings me to this question. I'm sorry, I had to. Izuku, however, can say that he will not win. Both need to see how they can handle their weaknesses, which is with the time limit they received, but the teacher did not. They don't see it as smashing all the walls, with Sato being wiped out of the sugar, doing them lose all their stamina. Cementoss gets them wrapped in a giant cement structure, and the two lose the match. Others are shocked that they were easily defeated, but Izuku knew it was hard. In another area, it's Tsuyu and Tokoyami's turn. as they face ectoplasm. It brings out a bunch of smoke clones and attacks. Overall, perhaps, this episode was basically a set-up for teachers facing students for the next couple of episodes. While not much action was here, it was still a pretty good episode with lots of cute Yaoyorozu moments, Mineta's stuck-up snob, but backing me up, making JoJo jokes and more mouse major. I also got very jealous of Quirk Sato because who wouldn't want to turn into a damn Hulk just drinking Mt Dew? Maybe it's just me and my sugar tooth. Not too much to show, but nothing at all to complain about. My Hero Academia is simulcasted on both Funimation and Crunchyroll. It can be seen saturday at 5:35 AM on both, with an oak tree that is on Funimation. The fight against Arrancars continues. Just as Ichigo is on the brink of death, Kenpachi Zaraki steps in and takes over the fight with Tesla's Espada. And Byakuya clashes with Zommari Rureaux, the fastest from Espadas, who is trying to complete the injured Rukia. Will his Bankai be enough to defeat Zommari when he uses Ruki's body as a shield?
